GRAND JURY.

Still Nosing Into The Asylum Muddle.

Most of The Witnesses Troubled With a Chronic Lapse of Memory.

The grand jury on yesterday resumed the investigation of the Western Asylum. One of the first witnesses was Inspector Henry D. Hines, one of the parties accused by Dr. McCormick and others of gambling. Eugene Wathen, the druggist, who was the main witness against Hines, Robertson and Phillips has evaded process and permanently quit the Asylum. It is said he has left the State and when he returns he will be a drummer for a Louisville house. The grand jury is still hard at work on the matter and will be for several days. Dr. Ray, the Superintendent, was a witness Saturday, but as the gambling occurred before he took charge he knew nothing important. The object in calling him was to learn the whereabouts of the absent employees wanted as witnesses.

It is understood that one important witness was found last week who talked and some of those who were non-committal on the first visit are expected to be recalled and have their memories refreshed.

Dr. McCormick has not yet arrived, but is expected this week. The presence of Judge Hines in the city yesterday gives color to the report sent out from Frankfort that the Inspector will make his official investigation this week also.

Poultry and Fruit Raising For Women.

This is an age of push, pull, and get there if you can. People are crazy on the subject of money getting. Vast multitudes are surging, drifting, climbing, digging and dying for gold or its equivalent. To the victor belongs the spoils is a ruinous aphorism that is becoming woven in our governmental, social and financial fabric.

It would hardly be a wonder if in this mighty scramble women were left out of the count. Yet such is not the case. Every thinking person sees that the women of this age are abreast with the leaders, and whether the women, or the spirit of the age, is responsible for this hopeful condition, the result is the same. It is one of the most cheering signs of the times that the womanhood of America is taking its rightful place in the world and advancement of the world. To do this a woman does not have to be masculine, "loud" or bold. There are a thousand volumes that lead to success if pursued by the true woman. A thousand opportunities for her purifying, elevating influence to work in a God-directed channel, accomplish her own family as well as benefiting others. The school room, the counting room, and the dry goods store is open to her services in the city, and the poultry, fruit, early garden, milk and butter, in the country, await the intelligent and painstaking care of her hands.

There are so many women in our cities, sewing all day and half the night for barely enough to keep soul and body together, while many thousands of dollars are being made by less proud, but wiser women, everywhere in the country. The poultry and small fruit farming offers a regularly inviting field to women who have no homes and whom must make their own living by their own labor. We have many examples of what a woman can do and has done in the poultry business. She is a born lover of pets. She counts it no trouble to provide for them. She can do more work with less complaint than a man, and above all the "little things" are not forgotten. We do not belong to the large army of women who are wild for recognition at the ballot box, yet we believe when it comes, as it surely will, there will be a purification in politics, as everything else with which women are connected. It will have a great tendency to purify our homes, and make the boys feel that they should stand for purity as they expect their sisters and sweethearts to do.

Naturally contented with unostentatious work, we women find plenty to do at present within the range of the good and useful, in helping others to find a way to do a woman's work in a woman's way.

In my next article I will commence in the primary department for a number of young friends in whom I am much interested. I haven't forgotten a sweet faced little girl in my travels last summer, who put her hand in mine and said: "I would so like to learn the millinery business," and her papa said: "I wouldn't swap places with another man, no matter what his employment or salary. We have the best of everything, fruits, vegetables, eggs, poultry, meat, milk, cream, butter, air, water, sunshine, flowers, everything, and we are free and independent, can go and come when we please, without asking any boss for the privilege of a day off." When her papa seemed so well contented I wondered why his little daughter and even his wife seemed to look, and to be discontented. After he had gone to the fields I complimented his wife on their beautiful home, and lactic about farm life, and is as happy and contented as a duck in the middle of a mud puddle, and I don't know but what I would be in his place, but as it is I am not. After 7 years of farm life I fairly hate the farm, and some times feel that I would rather die now than endure it another seven years. It is not because of the hard work, or because we are several miles from town, or that John is unkind, but is simply because I never have a dollar that I can call my own, that I feel perfectly free to do as I please with. You know I taught school before I was married, and afterwards when we lived in C. I had pupils in music, so that I always had money of my very own in my pocket, apart from that John gave me for house-keeping expenses, children's clothing, etc., and if I wanted to make a present, subscribe for a paper, or get any extras of any kind, could do it and feel happy and easy about it. I am nothing here, that is, my work does not pay in cash, and somehow, though a good deal of money comes in from the farm, there never seems to be any for extras unless it is for extra help out of doors, extra farming tools, etc. I sometimes feel that I would gladly swap places with my little girl, for she has her money regularly, and can feel that it is hers to do as she pleases with. I am one of the few who firmly believe that there is some remedy for every evil, every wrong, some way of righting everything that is not just as it should be; and in this matter of pin money for farmer's wives who have it not, I believe in many cases the woman can make things right, by earning her own pin money by keeping poultry. Of course, fowls are now kept on nearly every farm, but in most cases in a haphazard way, and the proceeds go into the family pocketbook. Let the poultry be turned over to the womenfolk to care for, for the profit, or a share of them, as may be deemed best by the parties most concerned, to be theirs absolutely, to spend just as they please, and my word for the poultry it will have better care and pay a large profit, besides the woman be more contented. MRS. ELLA THOMAS, Quarles, Mo.

THREE-FOOT MIDGET.

Mrs. Jennie St. Clair Harries Her Manager, Who Is No Giant Himself.

A bride, three feet tall, three married, possessing four feet and twenty finger nails, aged thirty-eight years and mother of a daughter sixteen years old, was the marital prize which Eugene R. Coyle, of Tama, Ia., proudly carried away from Magistrate Haue's office in Jeffersonville Wednesday, says the Courier-Journal.

She was Mrs. Jennie St. Clair, of Benton, Ill., known in the freak world as the "Little Lady." She hurriedly gave a kiss to the Magistrate and smilingly informed him that she must hurry back to the exhibitory platform at the New Albany Street Fair.

To a Courier-Journal reporter she said:

"Mr. Coyle has been my manager for four years. He has exhibited me in all parts of the world. I fell in love with him at first sight, but circumstances prevented our marriage before. He loved me from the beginning, too. Of I am so happy. My daughter will be pleased also. She likes Mr. Coyle and I have waited so patiently for this event. "Mr. Coyle has always been a showman and we propose to add attractions from now on. You see I am quite a card in myself, and the little woman looked up to her husband, standing five feet four inches, and received a kiss."

It may be more blessed to give than to receive, but with most people this is only a dressed parade theory.

The man who proposes to a widow is either a fool or a philanthropist.

—TUESDAY, JUNE 11, 1901—

The new cable between Canada and Australia will be 5,834 1/2 miles long, the longest in the world. It will cost $10,000,000.

The Illinois Central Good Roads train has made a date for Owensboro July 16 and 17, going from this city after the convention of the 11th.

Augustus E. Wilson, the Louisville lawyer and Republican politician, is dangerously ill with pneumonia.

Miss Ellen Rigby, a young woman of Sharon, Pa., has inherited $2,500,000 from a cousin who recently died in Brazil. She gets one-third of the estate.

The Good Roads Convention July 10 and 11 will be a great thing for Hopkinsville. Only two other cities in the State will be so fortunate as to get similar ones.

Mr. J. P. Rogers, Republican nominee for representative of Christian county, is indignant over the talk that a plan was being formed to take him off and put another candidate in his place. Mr. Rogers says he will stay on, and he expects to lead his ticket.

Mr. C. J. Norwood has been selected to fill his old place as state inspector of mines, which he held under the Buckner and Brown administrations. He was removed in 1896 to make way for a Republican. Mr. Norwood is perhaps the best qualified man in Kentucky for this responsible position.

The very latest important invention is a slot machine into which one can drop a nickel and have his picture taken automatically and passed out as a finished photographic. It is the invention of Matthew J. Stephens, a Chicago photographer, who has been working on it for eleven years and has spent $18,000 perfecting it. The cabinet will hold 1000 plates and an extra fixture holding 100 brass frames can be attached and operated so as to bring the pictures out framed. The machines cost $100.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out of this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

The best of all medicines for all humors.

The queerest house in the world is in New York. It is 104 feet long, four stories high and only five feet wide. It was built to shut off the light of a neighbor who refused to pay $5,000 for the lot. It looks like a bicycle case set on end. It contains narrow little casement-like rooms, with furniture especially built for the pigmy apartments. The stairways are as cramped as one can possibly imagine. It is impossible for two persons to pass in the halls. To accomplish such a passing one of the two must step into one of the rooms on the side. The table in the dining-room is 1 foot 6 inches wide, and the rest of the furniture is built in proportion. Richardson, the man who built the house, is dead and the odd building is to be sold.

The Delineator for July is a decided improvement over former issues and contains some entirely new features, notably the illustrations in color. Some of these pictures represent Pan-American Exposition scenes and all of the beautiful effects of the originals have been obtained. The work was all done by the Delineator's own artists. The edition for July has reached the great total of 625,000.

Faulkner Goldthwaite Loses West Point Cadetship.

West Point, N. Y., June 8.—The following cadets have been found deficient in examinations and were discharged this afternoon: Third class: William G. Mortlow and Edward L. Oldham, Tennessee. Fourth class: Cadets George, Texas, and Goldthwaite, Kentucky. The news contained in the above dispatch is a severe blow to an ambitious Hopkinsville boy. Faulkner Goldthwaite is the oldest son of Mrs. Willie F. Goldthwaite and since early childhood has cherished an ambition to enter military life. Two years ago when only 16 he was sent to a preparatory school with the hope that he could get into West Point later on. He was still a mere boy and was not expecting an opportunity for two or three years. A new law was passed giving Senator Lindsay the appointment of an extra cadet and young Goldthwaite's friends succeeded in getting this place for him, although he had not finished the preparatory course.

He entered the school a year ago and by hard study succeeded in keeping up with more advanced and older students. The annual examinations came on this month and of the five branches he passed four and wrote his mother that he had only one more and was very hopeful of getting through all right. This examination was held Saturday and he failed at the last trial.

GAVE MANY KNOCKS.

And Finally Secretary Root's Door Was Opened Upto Him.

Now Senator Foraker Discovered Secret Code Invented by the Chief of the War Department—Anger Conquered Discretion.

In order to obtain an entrance into Secretary Root's private office at Washington after the hours upon which he is on public view one must have a knowledge of the code of knocks, for the secretary has a signal that must be given before the door of his sanctum will swing from its hinges. When it was first adopted the new scheme worked like a charm, and senators, representatives, tourists and other unwelcome callers have gone up against the door and knocked till their knuckles were sore without result, because they did not know the secret code. Since the lock-out has been placed at two o'clock instead of three the casualties have been even greater, although no cabinet officer has fallen a victim since the memorable occasion when Secretary Hay tried all the knocks he knew.

The other day, however, Senator Foraker triumphed over the door without the faintest knowledge of the open sesame, and he has been chucking over his victory ever since. The countersign knock has by this time become a matter of notoriety to congressmen, so many of them having fallen victims to it. Accordingly when Mr. Foraker arrived at the war department and found the doors locked he knew what it meant and frowned. The stories his colleagues had told of their vain efforts to learn the countersign flashed across his mind. He had taken pains to get there before three o'clock so as to avoid the usual defeat, and yet the doors were locked. He knew that behind it were three sturdily colored men, who would listen competently to his futile knocks and never stir toward the doorknob. Nay, more, they would probably grin.

But Mr. Foraker is not one to give in easily. He frowned again, bit his lip and dashed his fist furiously against the door. Then he listened and thought he heard a far-away chuckle on the other side. His scowl grew deeper and his fist rattled the doorknob impatiently, conscious that a group of newspaper men, sworn to secrecy about the correct fraternity knock, were regarding him gravely and that the secretary's men were chuckling on the other side.

Then Mr. Foraker stepped away and thought for a moment. His anger overcame him and he decided to return and give a few hammer blows to the doors just to express his opinion of it. Accordingly he raised his fist and gave it would never do to tell how many knocks he gave or in what way he gave them, but he knocked in an unusual way. This was simply because he was angry.

As the last knock rang out an answering knuckle sounded on the inside. Mr. Foraker, deeming this more sarcasm, hit the door again. To his intense astonishment it flew open and a bowing attendant stood before him, inviting him to the secretary's presence. He had accidentally hit on the right knock. As for the attendant, who had supposed it to be a war department clerk, he was dumfounded.

"Well, right in, senator," he gasped. And as the senator vanished in the secretary's room he caught the words:

"How did he ever learn that knock?"

Mr. Foraker came out of the secretary's room beaming all over, after a most satisfactory interview. He has done something that few other visitors have accomplished. Only one thing bothers him now—he wishes he could remember that knock.

Inventor of the Shirtwaist.

To Mrs. Robert Osborn, of New York, belongs the credit of being the inventor of the now popular shirtwaist. A member of the fashionable set at Newport, Mrs. Osborn was an enthusiastic tennis player, and instructed a man shirtmaker of New York to build her a waist and her design to allow free play to the muscles while in active exercise. That first waist was made of pale blue percale. Mrs. Osborn had a good fortune to originate a style which has stood the test of time. During the recent financial crash her husband lost his fortune, and Mrs. Osborn has started to build a competence by designing gowns. Her dramatic breakfasts and musical teas have won for themselves a place in New York's "409," and they are said to be among the most successful ones in the city.

Osteopathy.

(From Our Special Correspondent.)
Franklin, Ky., June 10th, 1901.

EDITOR KENTUCKIAN:—
"How long will it take to cure me and what will it cost? That depends upon many things. We have had patients who expected to be cured in a month after ten years of sickness. This may be unreasonable. No doctor can undo within a short time what has taken years or many months to do. Most of our cases are chronic cases, that have been treated years without success by medical doctors. We have cured chronic cases with ONE TREATMENT. It would be misleading to suggest such results in your case. As a rule it takes some time to benefit cases of long standing; but it depends upon the condition. As a rule we discharge our chronic cases within a comparatively short time. Our patients consider the results they get little short of marvelous. Very often the best results come late—even after the treatment has been discontinued. We have had patients stop treatment and not be entirely satisfied with the results of one or two months treatment and write us that they rapidly got entirely well after going home the result of the treatment they had taken. It takes time to get effects. There is no magic in Osteopathy. It is Nature working at her best. The Osteopath is helping Nature. We are positive that we can do more than any other system and are willing to make a comparative test at any time.

The cost will be twenty-five dollars a month for treatment and from ten to fifteen dollars a month for board. At a cost of forty dollars you can take a month's rest and treatment in one of the nicest summer resorts in the country—Franklin, Kentucky. This is the time for overworked teachers and business and professional men to get in shape for the fall work. We will help you. Write us about it.

MAN OF THE FUTURE.

Winston Spencer Churchill May
Some Day Be Prime Minister of Great Britain.

The London Daily News predicts that Winston Spencer Churchill will one day be premier of Great Britain. The young, inflammatorian has grown much into his 26 years. He went into the army at 21, and in the same year spent his leave with the Spanish forces in Cuba. His impressions of the fighting there were contributed in a series of picturesque letters to the London Daily Graphic. Two years later (1897) he became attached to the Thirty-first Punjab Infantry with the Malakand field force.

WINSTON SPENCER CHURCHILL.
(Young Man Who May Some Day Be Premier of Great Britain.)

He was present at the operations in Bajaur, including the actions of September 16 and 30, and returned with a medal and mention in dispatches. The literary fruit of his campaign in Malakand was the best book on the expedition that has been written. The next year he went out to Tirah as orderly officer to W. Lockhart, and hardly had he returned to Europe when he went up the Nile with the 1898 expedition, under the afloat, and in the one bit of hand-to-hand fighting of the battle of Omdurman—the charge of the Twenty-first Lancers, the regiment to which he was attached. He wrote a book on that campaign.

When the South African war broke out Churchill went to the front as correspondent of the London Morning Post. He was captured and held a prisoner in Pretoria until he made his escape in woman's clothes. Upon his return from that war he was elected member of parliament.

UGLIEST WOMAN ALIVE.

She is an Indian, Known as "Zeekie," 120 Years Old, and a Resident of Washington.

A unique double distinction belongs to "Zeekie," an Indian woman who lives at Neah Bay, Wash. She is said to be not only the oldest, but also the ugliest person of her own or any other race on the Pacific coast, if not in the world. As to her great age, there are no positive proofs, but a single glance at her photograph is sufficient to establish her rightful title to the second distinction.

She was born at Neah Bay, where she has lived ever since, and Indians who are now more than 70 years old say that when they were born "Zeekie" was already an elderly woman.

an with grown children. She is a good-natured old person, and always attempts to kiss and hug people of both sexes who strike her fancy. Whenever she meets a stranger she immediately asks for tobacco, and if it is forthcoming, she at once eats it greedily, this setting at defiance all known rules of health. She is nearly blind, and she has never seen herself in a mirror, so that she has never had an idea of how striking is her appearance. She is supported by the government, and in excellent "chick" announces that she intends to live 30 years longer, or until she reaches the ripe old age of 150 years.

A Nation of Tea Drinkers.
The tea-drinking capacity of the British people is alluded to in Tea, the new monthly paper of the trade, which states that in the United Kingdom nearly six pounds of tea per head of population is consumed. Sixteen years ago the per capita consumption amounted approximately to five pounds. There is no other European country where such a per capita consumption is approached; there is no other European country, with the exception of Holland, where the consumption of tea exceeds one pound a head. In Russia and in the United States also, which are the other two large tea-consuming countries, the consumption amounts to under one pound a head.

GOOD ROADS MEETING.

Crofton People to Discuss Plans
For More Pikes.

The people of Crofton are dissatisfied with their share of the free turnpike fund and have called a public meeting for June 29 which is signed by fifteen prominent citizens. The call is as follows:

In view of the action of the Fiscal court of Christian county, in matters pertaining to the manner in which appropriations have been made placing the money appropriated for freeing and piking the roads of the county, almost exclusively in the South and showing by their actions that it is their purpose to ignore the North part of the county in these appropriations.

Therefore, we the undersigned citizens of North Christian issue this call for all tax payers and persons interested in having good roads to meet at Crofton on Saturday, June 29, 1901, for the purpose of discussing ways and means we can improve our roads.

In recognition of their honesty and fairness we wish to exonerate all these members of the court who spoke so boldly and fearlessly, in behalf of the interests of the people of North Christian:

David E. Bowles, M. B. Brown, G. W. Lovan, J. R. Shelton, C. M. Gray, J. W. Bowling, P. A. Woodruff, A. C. Brasher, C. C. Croft, S. H. Williams, Solomon Smith, W. M. Meacham, J. M. Dulin, W. L. Scates, John H. Myers.

REAR-END COLLISION.

Two Buggies Smashed up and a Man Hurt at Herndon.

Dr. J. E. Stone's horse, driven by a boy named Tom Harrison, ran away at Herndon Saturday.

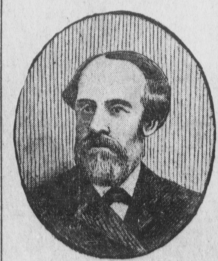

Harrison was thrown out, but was not hurt. The horse continued to run and ran into S. D. Radford's buggy from the rear, throwing Mr. Radford out and landing him under a double shovel plow he had in his lap.

A boy in the buggy with him was also thrown out. Both escaped unhurt, but the buggy was demolished. The runaway then ran into another buggy, throwing B. Faulkner and D. Vier, badly bruising Vier's side and smashing his buggy. After running two miles the horse stopped with only slight injuries to Dr. Stone's buggy.

ate, is a Connecticut man, and has represented his state in the United States senate since March, 1879. He has been re-elected every succeeding six years since that time, and his present term will expire in 1903. Mr. Platt says he is tired of having to stay silent upon measures he wishes to talk about and to listen to unlimited discussion about measures to which he is opposed. This sort of sentiment is considered revolutionary by the senatorian code, but Mr. Platt doesn't care by what name they call his programme so long as he can hope to secure it. The Connecticut senator has been associated with parliamentary matters since 1855—when he became clerk of the senate of the legislature of his state. In 1860 he was speaker of the Connecticut house, all of which, together with his 32 years' experience in Washington, makes him

KISSING A CRIME IN RUSSIA.

The Curious Case of two swains and their sweethearts. Occasionally inclined maids are hereby warned against the empire of the czar. By a recent decision of a grave, reverend and presumably unbiased and unbiassed judge, imprisonment is made the penalty for public commission of the sweet caress.

It appears that two swains of Russia and two young women, their respective sweethearts, were so unfortunate as to bring down upon their unthinking heads the disapproving observation of certain of the law's minions. This overt act was met with stern rebuke by the unwelcome witnesses, and by still severer displeasure on the part of the judicial authority before whom the facts were recited. "Throw the guilty parties into a detention keep!" we may imagine the jurist thundering in all his wrathful majesty. And they were cast into prison.

The dictionary defines a kiss thus: "A form of affectionate salutation expressed by the contact with pressure of the lips, a salute or pressure with the lips, as 'Give me a kiss.'" To which the good and ever gratifying Dr. Holmes—Oliver Wendell, he is remembered, not Sherlock—has added:

"The sound of a kiss is not so loud as that of a cannon, but its echo lasts a great deal longer."

The same high authority, the dictionary, holds, as regards crime:

"An act that subjects the door to legal punishment; a grave offense against social order; abstractly, flagrant violation of law or morality in general; wickedness; iniquity."

And the Russian court holds kissing a crime. Of course, this ruling has not been handed down without considerable opposition on the part of those who represent the kissing interests. In behalf of the osculating portion of the subjects of the czar, there have been eloquent speeches made in favor of the retention and upholding of the ancient and honorable institution.

Silver-tongued orators of the St. Petersburg forum have roused the echoes with their scathing denunciations of enemies of the kiss. Fair maids have lobbied in behalf of the tender expression. Kissing men have stood shoulder to shoulder, and kissing maids have lined up and fought for the legalization of the kiss.

Persons of the opposite sex must kiss, has been the argument. It was better 'twere done in private, far removed from the curious gaze of the gaping crowd, but if no privacy be obtainable, then it is permissible to kiss in public, has been the simple creed of the advocates. But the judges have hardened their hearts, and no more must the resounding smack be heard in the frozen land, for the prison yawns for such offenders as come within range of the unsympathetic vision of the Russian police.

A CRIMINAL.

Usually Leads the Life He Does Because of Deliberate Choice.

A friend of mine, the minister of a West End chapel in London, tells how, in his last visit to America, he preached in one of the larger jails, says the Nineteenth Century, and after the service visited some of the prisoners in their cells. One was interested in him especially, a man of good education and address, and seemingly of abilities fitted to command success in the world. My friend gave vent to his sincere distress at finding such a man in such a position, and was going on to "improve the occasion," when the prisoner cut in with the remark that he believed in England we were fond of fox hunting. My friend, regarding it as a broad hint to change the subject, assented. "And may I ask," said his companion, "when men are in a fall does he give up hunting?" And on getting the possible answer to such a question, he added: "I have had a bad fall, no mistake; but I count on better luck another time." This case is thoroughly typical. The true professional is not a weak creature who yields to uncontrollable impulse. Loving a life of adventure, and having a soul above working for his living, he pursues a life of crime with a full appreciation of its risks. Change those risks to certainties, and you at once supply a motive adequate to influence his course. If every fox hunter ended by breaking his neck, or hunting would be shunned, save by a few desperate men; and the same would be true of professional crime if the character of it always ended in disaster.

WHEN MORNING COMES.

"(William M. Evans' last words were: 'Morning is coming.')"
We call it day, but it is day—
For power and for play—
Through which we come and tall away
Mayhap the fretful and the pain.
The early and the late,
And struggle after worldly gains
Are only dreams that haunt us through
Weary, dreary night.

We learn to love and then, alas!
Grief never us ever stills—
Even as we raise the joyful glass
Pile dishes to it to bibe.
The best rewards are always kept
Just out of reach of sight.
But happy, after we have slept,
A glorious dawn may break and end
A weary, dreary night.

We fondly hope and darkly doubt,
We struggle in despair;
We trust our anxious fingers out
And clutch but empty air.

And yet, who knows? Mayhap the day
Is still to dawn the light
May sweep our troubled dreams away
And bring the joys denied us through
A weary, dreary night.

How Littlepage Took Care of Her

LITTLEPAGE was a typical southern gentleman. A young man, he belonged to the old school. His family was one of the few in Alabama which was wealthy after the war had closed. He had been brought up in the good old way. He had a quick temper, a ready revolver, and most people would say was an exaggerated idea of courtesy and chivalry to women. He went through college and then through a technical school, coming out with a degree as electrical engineer. Then he came north to take a position with a large manufacturing corporation. Within a few months he had made many warm friends who admired him both for his ability and for his courtly manners.

Finally he was ordered by his company to go east to look over an electrical invention which they were thinking about buying. The train left at three o'clock in the afternoon. He was delayed in reaching the station and it was within a few minutes of train time when he clambered on the rear end of the sleeping car. As he mounted the steps a man opened the car door and came out. It was Larsen, a young lawyer, with whom he was well acquainted in a business way.

"Why, hello, Littlepage," said the lawyer, "where are you going?"

"New York," said Littlepage.

"Great luck," Larsen answered.

"Just got time to go back and introduce you to my wife. She's called New York by her mother's illness."

It happened that the train was slowing up for a crossing, and the fat man had comparatively little difficulty in getting off. He landed on his feet, rolled over once or twice and finally got up again before the train got out of sight.

Then Littlepage went back to the aid of beauty in distress. She was still lying back in a dead faint. With the assistance of the conductor, he distracted Littlepage finally succeeded in bringing her back to her senses. She looked up at Littlepage and shuddered.

"Did you kill Cousin George?" were the first words she said.

"What do you mean?" asked the astonished Littlepage.

"I saw you draw your revolver on him just before I fainted," she explained. "I hadn't seen him before for ten years. He thought he recognized me when he first came into the car, and that was why he looked at me so closely. When he came back from the dining car he got a good look at me and made up his mind that he could not be mistaken. So he stopped and asked if I was not Angie Matthews."

"That was my maiden name, of course I knew he must be somebody who knew me. I explained, and he told me his name. He is my cousin, George Elliott. What did you do with him?"

"He got off the train a few miles down the road," Littlepage stammered.

"Why, he told me he was going through to New York. I believe you shot him and threw his body off the car."

"No," said Littlepage, "he got off without making any explanation. If you're worried about him I'll get off at the next station and see what's the matter. I guess perhaps I'd better do that anyway."—Chicago Tribune.

A Wind That Blew.

"You call this a stiff March wind?" remarked my friend, Dan. Weirich, the other evening. "Why, this is nothing. This is a southern spring zephyr compared with what we used to get when I was a boy. We were living then over on the farm, and our house was set in a very exposed place on a small hill. When the March wind blew it set a gale at it, and it was in a bed on rollers. Many a night in March I was awakened by the rolling of the bed all around the room. It would bang against all four walls, making such a noise that sleep was well-nigh impossible."

"What did you do then?" I ventured to ask.

"What could I do," said Dan, "but sleep on the floor and hang on to the bed to keep it from rolling. It was sleeping under duress, I'll admit, but then we didn't have many nights like that."—Albany Journal.
